

ACADEMIC FREEDOM

311

The teacher should be free to think and express ideas, free to select and employ materials and methods of instruction, free from excessive pressures of authority, and free to act as a member of a professional association. Such freedom should be exercised judiciously and prudently to the end that it promotes learning and creative thinking in students.

Academic freedom is not an absolute. It should be exercised within the basic ethical responsibilities of the teaching profession. These responsibilities include:

- 1) A commitment to the democratic tradition and its methods.
- 2) A concern for the welfare, growth, and development of children.
- 3) The application of good taste and judgment in selecting and employing materials and methods of instruction.
- 4) Privileges granted within this policy shall not be in opposition to other Board policies, statutory law, or case law.
